

Both my wife and I have XM Satellite Radio in our cars. We both enjoy the wide range of programming which XM Satellite Radio offers. In addition, when we were recently travelling through Washington DC we had the benefit of traffic reports which we found to be very helpful and informative. I can see no reason why satellite radio companies should be restricted in their programming and information which they broadcast.

I also believe that this type of competition is necessary and will result in an increase in quality and choices for the public.
